

Calling Doctor Jones.....

There once was a young man named Graham,
Who , an audience, with his guitar he could slay 'em.
He digs a groovacious guitar riff,
Gets funk'd on artistes from Stiff,
And finds peace where others see mayhem!

The reverend of the Roosters, the guiding light at the front of the band (as he knows where he's going), Mr Jones has scaled the dizziest of heights in the music business. (You'll be pleased to learn that, since the gig on the top of the Queens Head, the vertigo has retreated.)

Mr Jones was influenced by Northern Soul right from the start, following closely the careers of the "Two Georges", (Formby and Orwell) and is to release an essay soon on the direct correlation between escapology and work/life balance, with a chapter or two on grassroots and how to grow them.

Grahams favourite proverb is

"Acton * speaks louder than words".

* - (20th May '88)

His favourite colour is pink. And black. And white.